Student reflection

I felt very happy when my kangkong germinated. Initially, when my friends told me that their plant did not grow, I was worried about my own.

After a few days, the plant germinated. I placed it near the sunlight. It grew very well.

After two weeks, it has grown to full height and I used it to feed my rabbit which loves to eat the plant. It finished eating the plant in a very short time. This made me feel that the rabbit appreciates the hard work that I have taken to take care of the plant. It also helped me appreciate that in order to take care of a living thing, it needs a lot of care and love to grow it well. It also helped me to appreciate my parents more.
